Mountain Plains Mental Health Technology Transfer Center (MHTTC)

In 2018, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration funded the Mountain Plains MHTTC. The Mountain Plains MHTTC is a partnership between the University of North Dakota and the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education. The center serves Colorado, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, and Wyoming. Its primary focus is rural mental health, and it provides free training, resources, and technical assistance to individuals working with, and serving, people with mental health disorders.

Year FOUR Snapshot: August 16, 2021 – August 14, 2022

In year four, the Mountain Plains MHTTC team continued to address training and resource challenges due to the pandemic. Additional workforce development activities included developing resources, providing training, creating, and sharing continuing education opportunities, and offering technical assistance to individuals working with individuals experiencing mental illness throughout the six-state region. The team also maintained a website, expanded its social media presence, and continued to grow its electronic mailing list.

Events

Webinar trainings focused on specific topics like rural mental health, crisis response and safety planning, farm stress, and traumatic brain injury and mental health; direct technical assistance with tribal communities experiencing suicide clusters and numerous school mental health trainings. In person, events included the Leadership Academy, Training of Trainers for Educators, and the Migrant Farm Worker Curriculum. Event data only represents those events that were evaluated under the Government Performance and Results Modernization Act (GPRA) of 2010 and therefore underestimate the true reach of the center in year four.
