Mental Health Technology Transfer Center Network

Funded by Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration

The purpose of the MHTTC Network is technology transfer - disseminating and implementing evidence-based practices for mental disorders into the field.

Funded by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), the MHTTC Network includes 10 Regional Centers and a Network Coordinating Office.

Our collaborative network supports resource development and dissemination, training and technical assistance, and workforce development for the mental health field. We work with systems, organizations, and treatment practitioners involved in the delivery of mental health services to strengthen their capacity to deliver effective evidence-based practices to individuals. Our services cover the full continuum spanning mental illness prevention, treatment, and recovery support.

Today's Webinar

- January is National Quality of Life Month, a month in which many people decide to make changes in their lives to improve health and well-being
- Today's presentation will describe the underpinnings of quality of life and how they relate to mental health in the context of the lived experience of Black people
- We thank the SAMHSA CE-MHTTC for its partnership on the BPA Health Equity Webinar series
- Content has both Central East region and national relevance
- Our featured speaker is Cynthia Turner-Graham, MD

A group of Black people, including men, women, and children, are gathered around a small object, possibly a flower or a small gift, looking at it with interest and joy. The image is overlaid with a semi-transparent dark grey layer where the text is placed.

The Connection Between Quality of Life and Mental Health in the Black Community

OBJECTIVES

- Understand historical underpinnings of mental illness among Black people in the United States
- Correlate “weathering” experiences with social and political determinants of health
- Review the science that connects quality of life to mental health status
- Provide tools and resources for assessment that can aid in the evaluation and treatment planning for Black Americans with mental health concerns

Historical underpinnings of mental illness among Black people in the United States

!!!Zero references to Black, African American, Negro or racism in this!!! treatise

Johns Hopkins Department of Mental Health, Origins of Mental Health

Dr. Wallace Mandell wrote this article in 1995 during his tenure as department chair (1993 - 1997)

DEPARTMENT OF MENTAL HEALTH

Origins of Mental Health

“The term mental hygiene has a long history in the United States, having first been used by William Sweetzer in 1843. After the Civil War, which increased concern about the effects of unsanitary conditions, Dr. J. B. Gray, an eminent psychiatrist, envisioned a community-based mental hygiene that would operate through education, social culture, religion and involvement in national life.”

“In the 1908 prospectus of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, the first in the nation, an article was included that committed it to "war against the prevailing ignorance regarding conditions and modes of living which tend to produce mental disorders." For this purpose the society set about to secure state legislation and appropriations, develop coordinated local programs to impregnate the schools and courts with the preventive view, and disseminate sound attitudes toward mental and emotional problems.”

Black Mental Health: A Story of Resistance

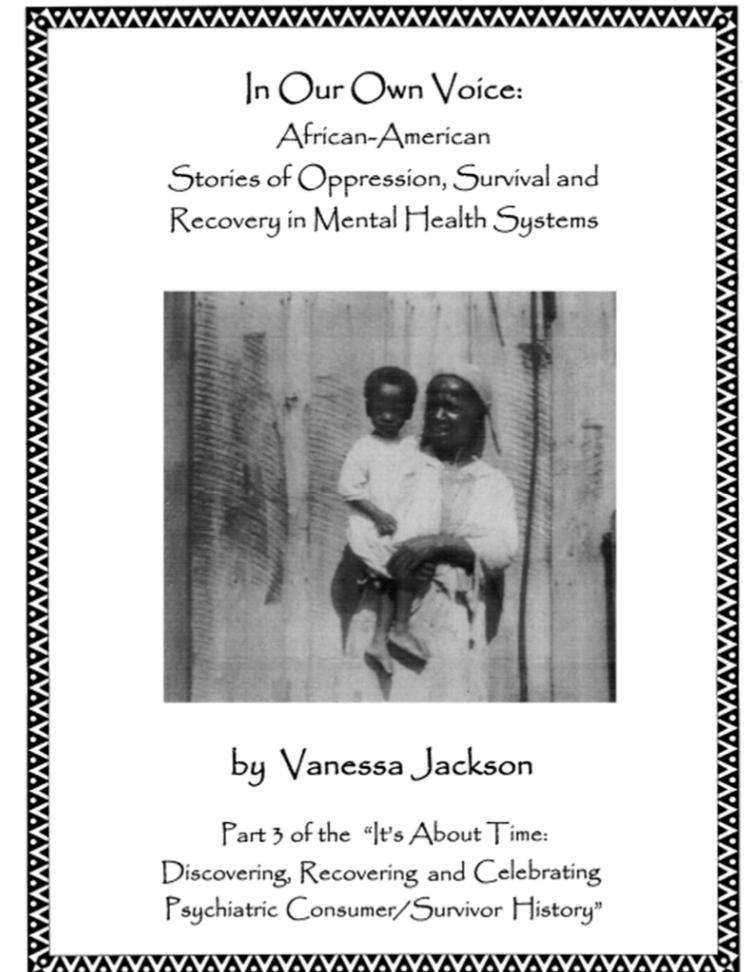

“History tells a bleak story of mental healthcare for Black Americans, dating back to the African diaspora. Much of the systemic racism that enslaved Black Americans faced can explain mental health disparities seen in this population today. . .most damaging were the eugenics movement and the psychosurgical movement. Eugenicists largely promoted the idea of White supremacy by using sterilization to limit births of specific populations. Black people experiencing mental illness and Black women were among the many identities that medical professionals sought to eliminate.”

~Jasmine Padgett

RTI Health Advance, Black Mental Health: A Story Of Resistance

“In 1848 John Galt, a physician and medical director of the Eastern Lunatic Asylum in Williamsburg, Virginia, offered that “blacks are immune to mental illness.” Galt hypothesized that enslaved Africans could not develop mental illness because as enslaved people, they did not own property, engage in commerce, or participate in civic affairs such as voting or holding office. . . Just as Black Americans overcame the oppressive mental health systems of the 18th century, this community will continue to make strides toward equitable mental healthcare.” ~Dr. Euchenna Umeh

MENTAL HEALTH PROMOTION IS MENTAL ILLNESS PREVENTION

PRIMARY PREVENTION

Primary prevention focuses on the prevention of mental health disorders in the community before they occur. This level of prevention aims to decrease risk factors and increase protective factors in order to prevent a mental health disorder from occurring in the first place.

SECONDARY PREVENTION

Secondary prevention focuses on the early detection and prompt intervention of mental health disorders. At this level of prevention, a patient already has a mental health disorder, and secondary prevention is aimed at detecting the disorder early in order to intervene promptly.

TERTIARY PREVENTION

Tertiary prevention focuses on the period after a mental health disorder or crisis has already occurred. The focus at this point is to help promote the patient's recovery as well as to prevent further complications.

Panel: Factors to support a thriving mental health state for Black Americans

Addressing systemic racism

Challenging and dismantling systemic racism in institutions and policies is crucial, including advocating for equitable education, employment opportunities, and criminal justice reforms.

Economic empowerment

Promoting economic opportunities and wealth-building initiatives for Black communities can create a stronger foundation for advancement.

Cultural recognition

Celebrating Black culture, history, and achievements, and ensuring proper representation in media, arts, and public spaces, can foster a sense of pride and empowerment.

Mental health and wellbeing support

Providing access to mental health resources that acknowledge and address the impact of racism on mental wellbeing is essential.

Community support and activities

Creating and fostering supportive networks and community initiatives that uplift and empower Black individuals can be instrumental in fostering thriving.

Education and awareness

Raising awareness about racial injustices, historical contexts, and the importance of allyship can help create a more inclusive and empathetic society.

IN CONCLUSION:

- 1. Only within a historical context can issues of mental health and illness of Black people in America be understood
- 2. There is a well-established direct, correlation between poor quality of life and poor mental health; when mental health worsens, so does quality of life, the converse also being true
- 3. Many resources go untapped that could be used to build community, bolster emotional literacy and mental health
