Native American Summit on Spirituality: Cultural Inclusion into Mental Health Assessments for Native Americans

The American Indian and Alaska Native ATTC and MHTTC have invited spiritual leaders from American Indian and Alaska Native communities to come together to discuss the importance of spirituality in the treatment of behavioral health and mental health disorders. Spirituality is often left out of counseling and therapeutic relationships, but is an essential part of healing and change for many clients.

Behavioral health, mental health, and addiction treatment professionals, spiritual leaders, social workers, and other health service professionals are welcome to attend this important discussion on methods for integrating spirituality into their work with clients.

Please note: the face-to-face event has been cancelled. We are planning to run a series of virtual meetings and reschedule a face-to-face event in the near future. Click the registration link to register for the first virtual session on Friday, March 20 from 2-4pm EDT, 1-3pm CDT, 12-2pm MDT, 11am-1pm PDT, 10am-12pm ADT.
