MENTAL WELLNESS IS CRITICAL DURING CORONAVIRUS

We're all adapting to a New Normal. Coronavirus has changed our jobs, our homes, our kids' schooling. Every parent is trying to adjust, to manage their changed work situation and changed home situation. We're all worried. None of us know what's coming next. And nor do our kids.

We know that suicide rates increase at times of stress, disconnection and loss of purpose, and our kids are experiencing all of these right now. Now, more than ever, we need to support our kids' mental health, and parents need to understand the basics of suicide awareness and prevention.
