

Emotional Intelligence Self-Reflection Questions

Start developing your emotional intelligence by asking yourself the following questions:

- 1. Do you practice checking in with yourself regarding how you are feeling? If so, are you able to describe in words how you feel?
- 2. Do you have a process to calm yourself down when you get angry, frustrated, or stressed? If so, what is your process?
- 3. Do you find yourself getting distracted by your own thoughts or things in the environment when listening to others? If so, what do you do to stay focused?
- 4. When you see others in distress, do you typically intervene? If so, what steps do you take to help? How are your actions received by others?
- 5. Do you conceal how you are feeling to your coworkers? When do you think it is appropriate to express your emotions at work? When is it inappropriate? Are there times when you would like to be more/less controlled?
- 6. Think about the people directly and indirectly impacted by your decisions at work. How would you feel if you were in their position(s)?
- 7. Do you tend to trust your intuition? How do you balance your intuition with logic?
- 8. When is it easier versus harder for you to be creative? Does your mood impact your creativity?
- 9. Think about one positive thing that came out of the last negative experience you were in (even if it is small). What did you learn from that negative experience?
- 10. Think about the aspects of your work that drive you to produce high quality work. What was the last project you worked on that you felt motivated by?
- 11. Think about the long-term goals you have that you would like to prioritize. Does your everyday work behavior bring you closer or further to those goals?
- 12. Are your tendencies different at work versus at home? Are there certain people, events, or projects that are particularly triggering for you – times when it is harder to control your emotions than others. If so, why do you think this is?
