

National School Mental Health Training Curriculum

ONLINE TRAINING MODULES

In 2019, the Mid-America Mental Health Technology Transfer Center (MHTTC) and National Center for School Mental Health (NCSMH) co-facilitated an in-person workshop breaking down the new National School Mental Health Curriculum for school mental health workers, educators and administrators. Now, you, too, can follow along with the training — for free!

What is the National School Mental Health Curriculum?

The National School Mental Health Curriculum was developed through the SAMHSA-funded Mental Health Technology Transfer Center (MHTTC) Network Coordinating Office (NCO) in collaboration with the National Center for School Mental Health (NCSMH) at the University of Maryland. This innovative and resource-rich curriculum help states, districts and schools across the United States understand the core components of comprehensive school mental health and engage in a planning process.

What can I expect from the training?

- Eight 1-hour modules
- Interactive quizzes
- Instruction from national leaders in school mental health

Upon completion of the modules, individuals will be able to:

- Describe the core components of comprehensive school mental health
- Gain awareness of and strategies needed to deliver the online modules
- Use the curriculum tools and resources to conduct school mental health consultation
- Guide teams in school mental health strategic planning
